O Lowly Ones, You Are But Vanity

Song 3 O lowly ones

Psalm 62 (For God alone my soul waits in silence; from Him comes my salvation. He alone is my rock and my salvation, my fortress; I shall not be greatly shaken… Those of low estate are but a breath; those of high estate are a delusion; in the balances they go up; together they are lighter than a breath. Put no trust in extortion; set no vain hopes on robbery; if riches increase, set not your heart on them.)

O lowly ones, you are but fleeting vapor's sigh!
O mighty men, your boasts a hollow lie!
If scales of truth your weights should e'er abide,
Even in dreams, you'd tip the lighter side.
Weigh not the wind – in God alone confide!

Trust not in cruelty's grasp, nor let it hold your sway,
Extol no glory born of plunder's ruthless way.
Set not your heart on riches' fleeting, gilded throne,
Pour out your soul to God – make Him your cornerstone.
In His vast sea, all vanities are overthrown.

Harm no soul in thought or deed, let malice find no nest,
Speak no folly's poisoned tongue, nor crave its dark behest.
Curse none within the chambers of your guarded breast,
Rest in God alone, where tempests find their rest.
His branches shade the weary, ever blessed.

What you trust in haste arrives by heaven's swift decree,
Your saving grace, your glory's gleam – in God, eternally.
No force shall sway you more than whispers of the sea,

Your burden's mount, your refuge's keep, dwell safe in His decree.
Unmoved you stand, where illusions cease to be.

By mercy's hand, O Lord, fill us with boundless tide,
Reward each deed as justice's measure wide.
Our souls recline toward God, in quiet waters bide,
From Him our rescue flows, no more to hide.
In poured-out hearts, His fullness we abide.

O lowly ones, you are but fleeting vapor's sigh!
O mighty men, your boasts a hollow lie!
If scales of truth your weights should e'er abide,
Even in dreams, you'd tip the lighter side.
